The Stonington battle flag, photographed by Fred Stewart Greene of Westerly, who recently presented a copy to the Westerly and Memorial Library association, is the original flag work along the ocean front repairing Library association, is the original flag holsted to the peak of the flagstaff at the fort in Stonington during the battle of August 10, 1814. The flagstaff was practically shattered by an English shot and the flag fell to the ground. It was understood that George Howe Fellows heroically picked up the fallen flag and nalled it to the remnant of the flagstaff. But the alleged heroism of Fellows has been doubted, the doubt being substantiated by the the doubt being substantiated by the Benjamin F. Palmer diary. Palmer was captured by the British and taken to Dartmore prison. George Howe Fel-lows was an inmate of the same prison, being captured prior to the flag incident. Therefore the man who really nailed the colors to the staff is not definitely known, but there is apparent authentic information that it was a Mystic man who stood on the shoul-ders of the commandant of the fort and mailed the historic ensign to the

The flag was given into the custody of Nathan Smith and presented by Caroline A. Smith to the Stonington Historical and Genealogical society, where it is carefully preserved. It is planned to feature this flag at the coming centennial celebration of the Battle of Stonington. Two steel flag poles are to be erected, one in Cannon Bail park and the other in one of the parklets near the rallway station. If weather permits, when the breeze is so slight that no damage would result to the tattered and tender battle flag, it will be raised on one of battle flag, it will be raised on one of the flag staffs with due ceremony and after a brief display, be replaced in its glass case and carefully preserved.

Only one resident of Westerly will be benefited if a bill becomes law that has been favorably reported in the national house of representatives. That resident is James A. Barber, a member of Eattery G. First Rhode Island Light attillery, who served with distinction in the Civil war. The bill will establish in the war and navy departments, a medal-of-honor roll and authorizing placing thereon, with a special pension of $10 a month, the names of surviving persons who have served the United States in any war, and to each of whom has been awarded a medal of honor for having in action, in actual conflict with the enemy, distinguished himself by gallantry or distinguished himself by gallantry or intrepidity, at the risk of his life, above and beyond the call of duty.

The favorable report on the bill states in part: "The laws of the United States which instituted the congressional medal of honor require for its sional medal of honor require for its obtainment a much higher degree of gallantry than is required by other nations for like decorations. Accordingly our medal of honor is hardest to gain, fewest in numbers and is the grandest recognition of gallantry in the world. * * The United States gives no special pension to her heroes who wear her medal of honor although who wear her medal of honor, although for merely meritorious service within line of duty, far less in degree than enacted into law, it will receive the hearty approval of all patriotic citizens and prove an inspiration to varorous deeds for the volunteer soldiers of the future."

A resolution of congratulation was adopted by a rising vote in the lower house of the Rhode Island general assembly to Deputy Speaker Frank H. Hammill of Bristol, who was married Friday morning. The speaker appointed a committee composed of Represen-tative Langworthy of Westerly and Representatives Balon and West of Providence to purchase a suitable gift
